“I want to make sure every patient feels heard and respected during each visit.”

About Marialuisa Doubek, FNP-BC

Marialuisa Doubek was drawn to medicine by a powerful combination of personal experiences — watching family and friends face terminal illness, witnessing the barriers that arise when patients cannot communicate in their own language, and a deep commitment to serving those most in need. "I am committed to becoming the best patient-centered care provider for those who need it most," she says. Marialuisa takes a holistic approach to care, addressing not only her patients' physical symptoms but also the psychosocial and lifestyle factors — including social determinants of health — that shape their overall well-being.

Marialuisa builds meaningful relationships by truly listening to her patients and transforming each visit into a human-centered experience built on trust, respect, and active collaboration. She is deeply committed to managing complex chronic diseases and helping patients achieve their own health goals. "I want to make sure every patient feels heard and respected during each visit," she says. Her work has made a tangible impact in underserved communities, helping to close gaps in health disparities by delivering VIP-level care to those who need it most.

When not with patients, she enjoys spending time with her husband and their two French bulldogs, Francesca and Miami, learning paddle boarding, and embracing the sunny Florida lifestyle.
